

SIGN UP WOLF ROAD EASEMENTS

First Right-of-way Dedication
Papers Signed at Mokena
Last Saturday Afternoon

The first actual move toward getting right of way on Wolf Road in order to start construction work was made last Saturday afternoon when a meeting of property owners along Wolf road and of the right of way committee of Will County consisting of Supervisors North of Lockport, Seehausen of Crete and Grinton of Joliet, was held at the J. V. Hall filling station half a mile north of Mokena. The first property owners and having the longest frontage on Wolf road to sign up for their share of land to be dedicated for right of way purposes, were Mrs. Mary Marti and Charles Hirsch whose farms face Wolf Road. The right of way committee immediately issued county vouchers to both in payment of the land dedicated for road purposes. The county engineer was not able to complete all the right of way papers, consequently some of the property owners who were ready to sign up had to wait until this week for the completion of the necessary papers by the county.

The proceedings went along fine until A. Nelson who built a house along the banks of a drainage ditch south of the Fred Brown place, was asked to sign right of way papers for the dedication of a certain frontage along his property. Mr. Nelson told the county committee that in as much as his property was under water during heavy rains owing to water from the route 51 subway being drained into the ditch flowing along his property, he wanted the county to fill up his yard with earth and dredge out the ditch so there would be a deeper channel, he would donate the right of way along his property frontage. The committee told Mr. Nelson that they could not grant his request and that the water he complained of was not being diverted into the ditch by the county, but by the state and he would have to take the matter up with the state highway department. Mr. Nelson turned a deaf ear to this and refused to sign altho his frontage for the new bridge site is an important one. The committee then told Mr. Nelson that if he did not sign now and intended to hold out that condemnation proceedings would be instituted against his property thru court. Mr. Nelson was the only objector.

Another set of right of way papers for right of way from the Will and Cook county line south to the J. V. Hall place will be released by the county engineer this week and the right of way committee will hold a meeting this Saturday afternoon at the new Mokena school auditorium commencing at 2 o'clock for the purpose of securing the signatures of the property owners to the dedication papers released. As soon as other papers are released the property owners will be notified so they can meet with the county committee.

There are 53 separate parcels of land along Wolf road from the Will and Cook County line south up to the Cleveland farm. The Wolf road has been surveyed to run thru the Cleveland farm to the Lincoln highway so as to eliminate all curves in the road. The matter of securing the needed right of way thru this farm will be taken up with Mr. Cleveland by the county committee.

The News-Bulletin wishes to call the attention of all those interested in the paving of Wolf road from the Cook county line south thru to Lincoln highway to this vital fact:

The funds voted for paving 58 miles of roads in Will County will in all probability, it is said, fail to reach to pay for this mileage and some roads designated on the county hard road program will have to be left unpaved until another bond issue can be voted by the county or gas tax funds will be available to complete them. Wolf Road was moved up to almost first place from its position of 23rd place on the road program, and if there is any procrastination on the part of the property owners in signing up for the needed right of way, Wolf road may lose its present position on the county road program and be placed in a deferred place on the program which would mean that the county funds might be exhausted and the construction of Wolf road be delayed indefinitely. Act now while the road funds are available and get this very important project thru.

Mokena has made a hard and determined fight for Wolf road and now that it is so near a reality let us not let it slip away just over quibbling over minor details regarding the right of way. The sooner the right of way is secured, the sooner actual work can be started. The county committee has given the assurance that contracts will be let within 15 days after the last right of way signature has been received.

Homewood P. O.
Held Up; Bank
Bandits Suspected

The Homewood postoffice was held up and robbed of $7,000 in stamps and cash and a bag of registered mail shortly after dinner time Saturday afternoon. The clerk of the post office was alone at the time. He described the bandits quite well, one being tall, the other short, both being armed with sawed off shot guns. From his description it is that both bandits are the same ones that held up and robbed the banks at Monee and Frankfort. The government men are working on the case now.

The robbers threw an empty mail pouch over the clerk's head and then bound him with straps taken from other mail pouches. They had their car parked in the rear of the post office. No one saw them and no one knew of the hold up until the clerk freed himself and gave the alarm.

New Lenox
Lions Sponsor
Cleanup Week

The New Lenox Lions Club is preparing for its annual cleanup week for the village of New Lenox. A committee has been busy raising the needed funds for defraying the expenses of hiring a truck to collect and haul the rubbish. Last year the Lions Club did the same work at a cost of $42. As New Lenox is not an incorporated village this cleanup campaign by the Lions Club is an important civic service to the community as a whole.

In addition to the cleanup campaign, the New Lenox Lions Club is also working with the New Lenox P. T. A., in a drive to raise funds with which to purchase equipment for the playground of the New Lenox public school. The club has done much for New Lenox in a civic way and its members are all fine boosters as well as efficient workers.

Favor New School District

The rapid development of New Lenox as a residential section is also bringing a school problem with it. The new school is filled to capacity and an additional room is needed.

A movement is on foot to create a new school district on the north side of Hickory creek with a view of building a new school there to take care of the subdivision school needs instead of building additional rooms to the present school building.

After the ceremony a five course supper was served at the home of the bride's parents. The table decorations were Easter lilies, carnations and roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Fehland will be at home to their many friends after May 10 at Monee.

Tinley Legion
Notes

The Post is completing plans for the observance of Memorial Day, May 30. The graves of veterans of all wars in nearby cemeteries will be decorated. Formal exercises under the auspices of the Post will be held at the cemetery at 10 a. m. The Rev. Paul T. Sanders of Orland Park, a former Army Chaplain has consented to deliver the address. The full program for the day will be printed within the next few weeks.

As part of its community work, the Post has donated a flag pole to the public school. Appropriate ceremonies dedicating the pole will be held on Flag Day, June 16.

The Legion will participate actively in the July 4th program in cooperation with the Lion's Club. Committees from both organizations have made preliminary plans.

The chief aim of the American Legion is service to the sick and disabled veterans. To this end, Tinley Park Post at its meeting Monday night decided to put all money received from street flags into its service fund. This will be augmented by the sale of veteran-made poppies on Poppy Day.

The Post voted Monday to buy some oilcloth for its dining room table. Much discussion on this subject has been held owing to the fact that those who opposed buying the oilcloth are believed to have used parliamentary tactics. However, the guilty comrades were detected, the oilcloth will be purchased and all is now quiet and harmonious in the Post.

Fred Goebel, representing the Tinley Lions Club was a visitor at the meeting April 21.

"We are nearer God's Heart In A Garden Than Anywhere Else on Earth."

The above citation was quoted by Mrs. R. J. Hug in her address to the Garden Club members after being re-elected by the Club for President for the ensuing year.

The regular monthly meeting of the Garden Club was held on Thursday, April 17th at the home of Mrs. George Hartman. Officers for the following year were elected as follows:

President, Mrs. R. J. Hug
Vice-President, Mrs. Wm. Funk
Secretary, Mrs. C. H. Goessel
Treasurer, Mrs. J. Boeyer
Flower Show Committee expressed the committee's appreciation to the club in it's entirety for the wonderful co-operation given them at the recent flower show at the Chicago Stadium. The club also wishes to take this means of thanking Mrs. J. C. Funk for donating use of her dishes at that event.

A very interesting and educational talk was given by Mrs. Florence Anderson, on various varieties of Wild Flowers now blooming in this locality, and illustrated her subject with "Living Examples", taken from their woods.

An interesting talk, compiled by the Bloom Aid Company was delivered by Mrs. G. Swisher.

Due to the absence of Mrs. E. Moss, Mrs. Florence Anderson acted as secretary.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. Hartman served refreshments which were very much enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Hug, Nielsen, and Goessel, as a committee of this Club, attended the birthday party and annual meeting of the Garden Club of Illinois at the Palmer House, Monday, April 21st. Interesting reports as to progress made in the preceding year were given, and officers for the ensuing year elected. Mrs. Fisher, Past President, was requested to take the position again for the following year, but she stated she held the office for sometime and wished someone else to take same. She was presented at this time with a beautiful silver bowl by the members for the wonderful service she had rendered while in office.

Mrs. W. B. Combs, President of the Rose Chapter, of Tinley Park Garden Club, also accompanied the committee to this "birthday party and meeting."

Luncheon was served at the close of the meeting.

The members of the Tinley Park Garden Club were extended an invitation by Mrs. Combs, President of Rose Chapter to attend a lecture on May 5th to be given by Mrs. Maud R. Jacobs at the home of Mrs. Towel.

PASTEL SHADES FOR LITTLE MISS; MANIPULATE STRAW SAME AS FELT

SPRINGTIME, pastel colorings and youth, what a happy trio this as it appears upon the 1930 juvenile style program. The way to appreciate the charm of this threefold combination is to visit the junior departments and specialty shops where little daughter may "try on" several of the adorable jacket-and-skirt ensembles made of either white or pastel flannel such as are playing a star role in the style realm of the younger generation this season.

These modish costumes, made so prettily and in such delectable tones

There's magic in the new straws this season, or is it the milliners who wield with a magician's touch? At any rate, a fairy wand must have waved over the new season's hats, for here they are with the multitudinous little tucks, folds, bends, drapes and other ingenious manipulation such as we had come to believe could only be accomplished with felt; but rub your eyes and look again, yes! they are actually of straw—these cunning molded-to-the-head 1930 chapeaux.

It is really a feature milliners are making much of this season—this and tints, are as winsome as any doting parent may wish for her child whom she wishes to see smartly dressed. As to the style-minded little Miss herself, just wait until she spies one of these adorable ensembles in such heavenly colors and with a frilly-frilly blouse as typified in the picture herewith, and see what happens! Either mother dear must order at once the model which has won the heart of her daughter or material must be purchased without delay for its making.

Mothers may look, and look, and look, and in the entire fabric realm they will find nothing in the way of smart weaves as thoroughly likable for the making of ensemble costumes for little folks as the very lovely pastel colored flannels which are so widely featured this season.

The model in the picture is very cunningly styled with a little jacket and a pleated skirt. The beauty of this costume is that it may be worn with different blouses. In this inworking of baku and panamalaque, paris meme, sisol, chanvre sole, and all the rest of the now-so-fashionable linenlike family of straws with the same facile as if they were felt.

The colors, too, of these straws are just as intriguing as were the beloved felts. Not that we are speaking of felts in the past tense, for the little felt hat is not by any means to be classed with the "has-beens." However, in the broad sense of the word this is a "straw season" and as we were saying, the fabriclike qualities of the new straws have inspired milliners to treat them in a manner befitting their light weight and suppleness.

A charming example of the straw hat which is tucked and fitted to the head as if it were felt, is shown at the top to the left in lower picture. It has a small feather trim at the back. The linenlike straw is in navy, for navy blue hats flourish in the mode, designed as they are to complement stance the jacket and skirt are made of baby blue flannel, the blouse of pale pink handkerchief linen, for light blue and pink is ever so chic used together.

Delicate green is another very fashionable color, as is also a range of yellowish tones, for children's flannel ensembles with the all-white flannel costume given special mention in the foreword for summer.

Lesson for April 27

GIVING UP ALL FOR THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 19:16-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Giving Jesus First Place.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Giving Jesus First Place.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Shall We Use Our Money?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Stewardship of Possessions.

The lesson title is likely to be misunderstood and the teaching misapplied. Christ did not directly, nor by implication teach that eternal life could be obtained by parting with possessions.

I. A Certain Young Man (v. 16). For a full view of the characteristics of this man, see Mark 10:17-30 and Luke 18:18-30.

1. His virtues.
(1) Courageous (Mark 10:7). He was of high standing—a rich young ruler (Luke 18:18, 23). To come to Jesus at this time might mean ostracism, but with manly courage he came. (2) Earnest (Mark 10:17). He knelt before Jesus, thus showing earnestness and sincerity. (3) High aspirations (v. 16). He wanted eternal life. Though taken up with the things of his present life, he felt the need of preparing for a life beyond. (4) Pious and moral (v. 20). From his youth he had conformed to God's moral law. (5) He believed that Christ could inform him of the "good thing" to be done to inherit eternal life.

2. His errors.
(1) About Christ (v. 16). He esteemed Jesus to be good, but did not apprehend Him as God; otherwise he would have known Him not merely as one who did good, but as one who is essentially good; that is, God. (2) Concerning himself. He thought he was good and that he could do something good. (3) Concerning eternal life. He thought that it could be obtained by good works. He did not know that the only way to gain eternal life was to receive it as a gift from God (Rom. 6:23).

II. The Lord's Dealing With Him (vv. 17-22).

Jesus skillfully led the young man to see his errors.
1. His question—"Why callest thou me good?" (v. 17). Before giving him a chance to answer He declared that only God was good, as if to say, "I am good, and therefore God." He was God manifest in the flesh, and repudiated the thought of being known merely as a good man.

2. Jesus' answer to the young man's question (vv. 17-20).

"If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." Christ met him here on his own ground, namely, that of the law. He took the young man's level that the young man's real worth might be revealed (Rom. 3:19, 20).

3. Christ's command (vv. 21, 22). Replying to Christ's citation of the commandments of the law, the young man asserted that he had kept them from his youth. Yet in his inner conscience he knew that there was something lacking. When he had to make the supreme decision between Jesus and his possessions, he chose wealth.

III. The Relationship of the Rich to the Kingdom (vv. 23-26).

This teaching concerning the peril of riches was most timely. Covetousness was fast taking hold of the people.

1. It is difficult for the rich to enter into the kingdom (vv. 23, 24). This difficulty lies not in the possession of riches, for a man may possess great riches and be an heir of the kingdom. Money in itself is essentially good. It will help the poor and help bring the gospel to the lost. The difficulty lies in trusting in riches.

2. Entrance into the kingdom, though difficult, is possible (vv. 25, 26).

(1) It is possible for the grace of God to sanctify riches, to open a man's eyes that he may see his downward course and repent, to change a man from self-seeking to self-sacrificing.

IV. Rewards for Following Christ (vv. 27-30).

Those who turn their backs upon their kindred and possessions for the sake of Christ shall receive an hundredfold in this life, and eternal life in the world to come.

Obedience

Obedience is the secret. Not slavish obedience, but sympathetic, loving, eager obedience. "His delight is in the law of the Lord." May the law of holiness be to me welcome as the light, sweet as the flowers, more to be desired than much fine gold.—W. L. Watkinson.

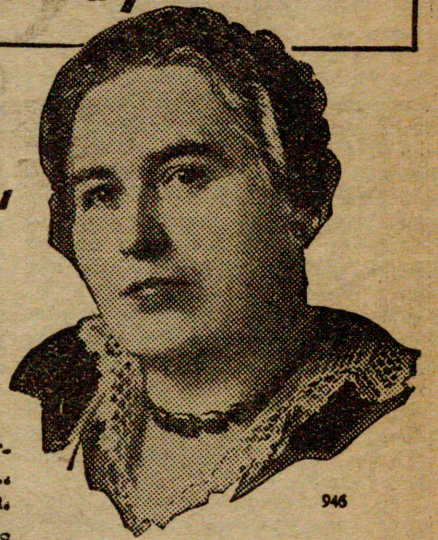

In Company With Jesus

Get into sympathy with Jesus. Seek His presence, seek His help. And walking through the world in His company, you will be as balm in the bleakest weather, a benediction in the wildest scene.—James Hamilton.

The Duty of Friendship

The only duty of friendship is that we and our friends should live at our highest and best when together. Having achieved that, we have fulfilled the law.—Randolph Bourne.

Yellowstone Park

Radio Playlet

A re-enactment of the Washburn-Doane expedition, in 1870, which made a discovery journey into what is now Yellowstone park, the greatest scenic wonderland in the Western hemisphere, is the subject matter for the weekly broadcast of the Conoco Adventurers.

Prior to the time of this expedition, various tales had been told by Indians and a few scattered hunters and scouts who had penetrated a short distance into the Montana wilderness, but the American people were extremely doubtful of these tales of boiling springs, geysers, volcanic peaks, and fields carpeted with wild flowers. It remained for the Washburn-Doane expedition to bring back the first authentic data regarding Yellowstone.

A thrilling incident in connection with the expedition, the disappearance and subsequent rescue of Truman Everts, one of the members of the party after he had wandered for nearly a month through the wilderness without weapons or supplies, is included in the Conoco dramatization. The playlet also gives an authentic historical story of the first conception of the plan to make Yellowstone a national park. The program may be heard over the N. B. C. network Thursday at 10 p. m.

His "One Big Moment"

Recalled by Doughboy

I journeyed to Kansas City, Mo., June 5, 1919, parked in a hotel, ordered a room, then went out and did some shopping on the main drag, salvaging an alarm clock, a pair of pajamas and a sergeant's whistle. Then to my room, tipped the bellhop two francs, gave him the whistle, instructed him to come to my room at 3 a. m., open the door and blow the whistle and to yell, "Outside!" Now this is where my big moment came in. I threw one of my hobnail shoes at that bellhop and sent him running down the hall. The other shoe I threw at the alarm clock, smashing it, then turned over, covered my head, and slept to my heart's content. Now, that was my big moment.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

TO KEEP HIS FEET FROM BLISTERING

Don Smith is a considerable master. He and his dog "Bill" have walked from New York to Los Angeles and are now at Cincinnati on their homeward bound hike. To protect "Bill's" paws from the rough roads, specially designed wool-lined shoes were made for the dog. "Bill" gets about 900 miles tramping out of these shoes. Many of the "Knights of the Road" would be pleased if their "dogs" could have such fine protection from rough roads. (Herbert, N. Y.)

FOR BETTER FOODS

ALTHOUGH canned foods are new universally accepted both by scientists and the public as healthful, nutritious and clean, and more of them were sold last year than in any previous year since the canning industry began, the keynote of the National Canners Convention in Chicago this year was an earnest effort to make all canned foods more nutritious and palatable than ever before.

To this end more than half of the nearly four score formal addresses which were delivered during the five days of the Convention were made by scientific men who are spending their lives studying this subject. There were men from great universities, from the elaborate research laboratories maintained by the Association and leading can manufacturing companies, from the United States Department of Agriculture, from the American Medical Association, from the Michigan Department of Agriculture, from the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, and from the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service.

A Huge Attendance

Old timers said that it was the best attended and most interesting Convention that this Association has ever held. A new departure from the programs of previous years was a series of informal conferences between canners and scientists to discuss raw products and technological problems. These proved a huge success. The room assigned was not big enough to hold the crowd that wanted to attend the first one; and the others were held in more spacious quarters. The object of these meetings was to make the immense amount of research work that is being done of direct and immediate value to the industry.

Another move toward the same end was made by setting up an exhibit from the large research laboratories of a big can manufacturing company right in the hotel where the Convention was given, and manning it with members of the laboratory staff. Many canners went out to the suburbs of Chicago to visit this laboratory last year; so much time was saved this year by bringing the laboratory in to them.

Many Prominent Scientists

That the industry as a whole is determined to improve its product, if possible, is proved by the caliber of the men whom they have called upon to help. Among the men from great universities who delivered one or more addresses at the different meetings during the course of the Convention were Dr. Walter H. Eddy of Columbia University, New York City; H. K. Hayes of the University of Minnesota, St. Paul; R. C. Gaylord of Purdue University, and J. H. McGilivray of the Purdue Experiment Station, Lafayette, Ind.; J. C. Walker of the University of Wisconsin, Madison; and A. T. Irwin of the State College of Agriculture, Ames, Ia.

Other prominent physicians and scientists who addressed the Convention were Dr. Morris Fishbein of the American Medical Association; Dr. Karl Meyer of the Hooper Foundation, Director of the California Board of Health; W. C. Geagley, State Analyst of the Michigan Department of Agriculture; O. M. Watson of the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service, and the following men from the U. S. Department of Agriculture: Paul B. Dunbar, Assistant Chief of the Food, Drug and Insecticide Administration; W. Z. Zanneyer of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C.; H. C. Diehl of the Wenatchee, Wash., Office, and L. L. Harter and D. N. Shoemaker of Washington, D. C.

Many scientists who devote all their time to food research also discussed their latest findings before the Convention. These included the following from the National Canners Association laboratories in Washington, D. C., and San Francisco, Calif.: Dr. W. D. Bigelow, Director in Charge; Charles G. Woodbury, Director of Raw Products Research; Dr. E. F. Kohman; H. R. Smith; E. J. Cameron; C. A. Greenleaf, and John Yesair of Washington, D. C., and J. R. Esty, Director, and G. S. Bohart of the Western Branch Laboratory at San Francisco, Calif.

Research men from the American Can Company's large laboratory at Maywood, Ill., who presented papers and led discussions were W. E. Vaughan, C. O. Ball and D. F. Sampson, and those from the Continental Can Company's Research Department in Chicago were William H. Harrison, Manager, and A. E. Stevenson.

Education for All

Another earnest of the canning industry's firm intention to provide the American housewife with the best foods possible is the maintenance by several leading agricultural colleges of special schools for canners. The purpose of these is to acquaint field men and agricultural specialists employed by canners with the recent findings in agricultural research which may be applied with profit in the improvement of production.

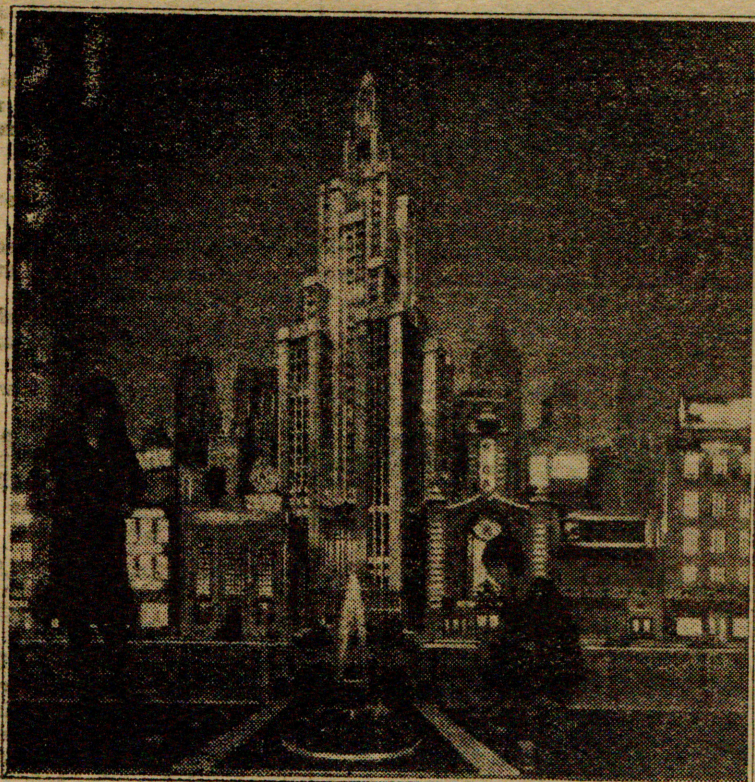

As one prominent canner put it, "the industry is in splendid condition, and we want to keep faith with the American housewife who is the goose who lays our golden eggs. But she is far from being a goose in her judgment, and there would be no more golden eggs for us if we did not keep on improving our product year after year."

Chicago Lighting Institute

Now Open to Public

Another forward step in the Chicago area's progress as the electrical center of the world was made with the recent opening of the Chicago Lighting Institute. Samuel Insull, Jr., who made the principal address in the opening ceremonies, classed the conquering of darkness by electric light among the great fundamental human victories over natural handicaps. The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois and virtually all of the electric light and power utilities of the Chicago and distributors of lighting equipment and distributors of lighting equipment, compose the membership of the institute.

Occupying the thirty-sixth and also part of the thirty-seventh floors of the new Civic Opera building at 20 North Wacker Drive, the institute is a complete laboratory in which all forms of electric illumination can be demonstrated under actual working conditions. The public is welcome at the institute at any time. The lounge and dining facilities of the Electric Association, on the thirty-ninth floor of the building, will be available to all visitors to the institute.

Among the many exhibits is a miniature replica of the barn and silo at the Public Service Company's Model Farm near Mundelein. This display is life-like in appearance and a number of parts are in motion to contribute to the illusion.

The possibilities of modern illumination and electric appliance use in the home are demonstrated in a completely equipped and furnished 6 room model apartment.

One of the leading features of the institute is a two-story auditorium seating 225 persons. A theatre atmosphere is created by spectacular lighting effects; four special installations made possible experiments with direct, semi-direct and indirect illumination and special floodlighting. Specially constructed scenery at the back of the stage can be arranged to give the effect of a model city. Here various applications of electric illumination, floodlighting and advertising may be tested.

A second two-story demonstration adjoining the theatre, is devoted to industrial lighting. Here the visitor can study the comparative efficiency of various methods of lighting while actually at work at a bench or lathe.

An avenue running half way thru the institute is used to demonstrate lighting of show windows, as found in stores. In the outdoor lighting fixture room are shown floodlighting and electric advertising, as well as displays of street lighting. Railway car lighting also is shown. There is also a complete demonstration of aviation lighting, including a panorama of a landing field properly illuminated. A separate exhibit also is maintained for schoolroom and office lighting and there are numerous other special exhibits.

TELEPHONE TESTSET HELPS NAB AUTOMOBILE THIEVES

Frank O. Tucker of Malden, Mass., was atop a telephone pole doing some repair work in Everett, Mass., when an automobile stopped directly beneath him with a blow-out. Two youths jumped out and when they began hammering off the lock on the spare tire on the back of the car and seemed much excited, the telephone lineman became suspicious.

Unaware of his proximity, they continued with their hammering while Tucker plugged in on a telephone line with his portable telephone testset and got in touch with the local police captain, who sent several officers to the scene. The two youths were arrested on a charge of the larceny of the automobile.

STORY FROM THE START

Returning to America, during the War of 1812, after a successful voyage, Capt. Lion Fellowes' merchant ship Sachem is sunk off Portugal by a British frigate. His crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English-speaking girl who conceals her identity. He learns from her, however, that she is about to set out for Lisbon. Fellowes goes to Lisbon, hoping to find a vessel America bound. He meets Captain Chater of the American ship True Bounty, an acquaintance. Chater offers him a berth as mate. Fellowes refuses, knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of the True Bounty. Cara induces him to sail as mate. Fellowes falls in love with her. The True Bounty is stopped by the British frigate, Badger, Captain Collishawe. Despite his American citizenship Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger as a "pressed" man. Madened at what he believes is Cara's and Chater's treachery he strikes Collishawe, who orders him a hundred lashes with the "cat."

CHAPTER IV

Tom Grogan and Cuffee Cockroach

In his delirium Fellowes was plagued by a weird specter—the head of Collishawe on the sinewy torso of Bob Clinch—that brandished a dripping cat over his lacerated back. But always as the lashes were about to fall a gigantic black figure intervened, and a soft, crooning voice quieted his frenzied defiance.

"Hush yo'se, mars'r, Cuffee hol' yo' han'. Dar, yo' don' need noller—ain't only Cuffee 'n' Tom wid yo'."

Fellowes raised his head as the negro spoke, and his lips parted in a groan. He was lying on his stomach on a pile of hammocks; the yellow glare of a battle-lantern, suspended above him, revealed the confined space of the Badger's berth-deck. From his neck to his loins his back was a blaze of agony.

"How long have I been here?" he whispered.

"Dis two night. Yo' hab much hobbory, mars'r. Yo' holler, an' yo' yell, an' yo' wan' fo' kill him cap'n. Oh, my aunt, yo' plenty sick!"

Fellowes moved again, tentatively, to ease a stiffness in his legs, and with the stab of pain which shot through him he felt an oily moisture percolating down his flanks.

"What have you got on me?" he asked, between gritted teeth.

"Plenty slush. Dat best fo' yo'. Bob Clinch fotch him from cookee. Yo' go fo' sleep." The negro settled back on his heels. "Sleep mo' better fo' yo'."

"But why do you do this for me?" exclaimed Fellowes.

"Cuffee help yo' fo' dat yo' strike him cap'n bad face. An' Cuffee tink yo' plenty juju fo' take fogglin' widout holler. Cuffee like yo' fine."

"I'm very grateful," said Fellowes weakly. "You—it's the last thing I expected. What did you say your name was?"

"Cuffee, mars'r—Cuffee Cockroach. Now yo' go fo' sleep."

The crooning voice hummed a slow, monotonous tune, and despite himself, despite the pain that racked and burned, Fellowes drifted off into a drowsing slumber. When he awakened sunshine was pouring down an open hatch. He turned his head with difficulty, and at once a gruff voice spoke beside him.

"Easy all, shipmate. That back's purty tender."

The speaker was the short, bow-legged sailor, of the bristling black beard and mahogany-tanned hide.

"There was a negro here," Fellowes answered feebly. "In the night—"

"Cuffee, messmate. He's on watch—leastways, he's at gun-drill. Ye wouldn't skeerly suspect it, now, would ye, but that nigger's a master hand with Long Tom? Holystone me, if he ain't the smartest gunner I ever seed."

"Your name is Tom, isn't it?"

"Tom Grogan of Philadelph'y, P. A.—likewise, A. B. Pressed off the schooner Martha out o' Baltimore. But mebbe ye could eat a morsel? All ye had was a sup o' rum since ye came below."

He dropped on his knees by Fellowes' head, and offered him a spoonful of steamy liquid from a pannikin.

"Cuffee cooked this for ye," he pursued. "For an ign'rant nigger he's got a surprisin' lot o' knowhow."

Fellowes was amazed at the taste and savor of the mess.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Salt-horse 'n' hardtack 'n' whatever Cuffee could steal out o' the galley," Grogan replied, grinning. "He's a master-cook, too—that's how we shipped him on the Martha."

"You were pressed together?"

"For sartain. Collishawe was only for takin' me, but Cuffee, he up and says as how he's allus shipped with me, 'n' if I'm transferin' to the r'yal navy, why, he'll come, too."

"Then Cuffee isn't a slave?"

Grogan set down the pannikin, and scratched his ear doubtfully.

"Well, mate, that's a question I've often asked myself. Y'see, the Martha took him off the wreck of a slaver—San Jago, of Havana—dismissed in the Middle passage. He was the only livin' critter aboard. I guess he wouldn't have lasted more'n a day, if we hadn't happened by. Cap'n, he didn't want to take Cuffee off—but I was a curious young feller, and thar was a chance the slavers had left treasure behind 'em, so the cap'n, he heims 'n' baws and 'lows I can go, if so be I go alone, which same I did."

Fellowes found the narrative amusing. It removed his thoughts from his tortured back.

Grogan went on: "Cuffee come, 'n' he kissed my hand, and kneeled down on the deck in front of me. And after I took him back to the Martha, 'n' we'd fatted him a piece, why, ye jest couldn't pry him away from me. Cap'n, he called him 'Tom Grogan's nigger,' and nex' time we made Baltimore that's how the customs officers entered him. 'Cuffee Cockroach, property o' Tom Grogan, A. B., of Philadelph'y, P. A.'"

A shadow fell across Fellowes' face, and Clinch squatted opposite Grogan.

"Feel'n a mite more peckish, lad?" inquired the bosun. "Rot my guts, but yer a game bantam." He paused awkwardly. "No anemosectees, I 'ope?"

Fellowes thrust out a hand, regardless of the pain the movement caused him.

"I haven't anything against you, bosun," he answered. "I'm sore, but

"What Yo' Po' Fool' Do?" Cuffee Scolded.

I'll be up and about soon. And then I'll attend to the cur who used you." Clinch darted a worried look over his shoulder.

"Belay that talk, lad," he ordered, gruffly. "Twon't get ye nowhere. Ye can't reach the cap'n. Ain't it so, Tom Grogan? Yer a pressed man. Tell the lad I'm talkin' for 'is own good."

"Sartain, sartain," Grogan corroborated soothingly. "Ye got to use plain sense. Yer jest a pressed seaman like me 'n' Cuffee, only ye hit the cap'n in the jaw—and lived to reckon it."

"Aye, aye," agreed Clinch. "Don't forget that. Cripes, lad, a cap'n can't let one o' 'is men strike 'm. 'E was as easy as 'e could be."

"Easy!" Fellowes snapped scornfully. "I'd rather have been killed than flogged."

Clinch rose uncomfortably.

"See 'ere," he said, "I don't like the way ye talk. The cap'n, 'e's fair, but 'e's 'ard. All for discipline, 'e is."

Fellowes experienced a profound sensation of weakness. "It doesn't matter," he mumbled, fighting back the tears of rage that pricked his eyelids. "But if I live—G—d, how I hate the cur! And her! and her!"

His voice became a wail. There was a sudden patter of feet on the deck.

"What yo' po' fool' do?" Cuffee scolded. "Buckra mars'r, him silek, like lil chile. Yo' wan' fo' make him mo' bobbory?"

"We ain't done nothin' to him, nigger," Clinch protested. "'E was talkin' ag'in the cap'n."

"Yo' let him talk! Cap'n bad man. Someday him die. Dis buckra mars'r

Probably Only "Ghost" of Island on Record

I was staying in Oratava, Teneriffe, with the family of the English chaplain there. One very sultry day he asked me to come up to the flat roof of the house, as he wished to show me something very remarkable. Finding I had strong and far eyesight, he asked me to count the islands I could see round the coast of Teneriffe, and I found that, with Grande Canary, they numbered seven.

He then requested me to look through the telescope and name what I could see on the islet beyond Palma. And after I had specified a small palm tree, some low-growing trees and a small white hut, he showed me the latest map of these islands—which did not include the island we had plenty juju. Yah, him good man, him juju man."

The big, calloused hand slid caressingly on to Fellowes' head. "Dar, now, mars'r, yo' go fo' sleep. Cuffee here."

And the crooning, monotonous hum of liquid polysyllables fell like an anodyne on Fellowes' aching nerves.

The Long Islander improved steadily. His back, which, fortunately, he could not see, remained a horrid spectacle; but gradually the shredded flesh commenced to scab over, and, what meant most to him, his nerves eased off from the terrific tension imposed upon them. And now he was morbidly anxious lest the mitigation of his pain should quench the fire of hatred burning in his heart. But he need not have concerned himself. The first time he was assisted to the spar-deck, and saw, aloof in the sacred precincts aft, Collishawe's straight, trim figure, his eyes were clouded by the same red mist which had blinded him the day he boarded the Badger.

With nothing else to think of, Fellowes found diversion in whetting the edge of his hatred, scheming plans of vengeance. And slowly, as his mind became normal, he relinquished the fantastic dreams which had occupied him in his earlier convalescence. No ordinary retribution for him! No blow in the dark, no shot across a smoke-filled deck, no yielding to suicidal hysteria.

They'd stand face to face, aye, shir to ship, when the time came. Watching Collishawe, he discovered the Englishman's heart was bound up in the Badger. Smash her, take her from him, and Collishawe would suffer infinitely more than the pangs of death. But to take or trap the Badger Fellowes must first escape from her, and this posed an apparently insoluble problem. He cudgled his wits over it, and finally called on Tom and Cuffee for advice.

"Mebbe a man can escape when he's ashore," commented Tom; "but how ye goin' to escape anywhere in all this water?"

"There's always a way, if we can find it," Fellowes answered doggedly. "We must hope, and keep a watch. And if we do get ashore I'll buy a ship that can run the Badger into her hole in Davy Jones' locker—and you shall be with me."

Cuffee was all smiles. "Yo' hab Long Tom, Mars'r Fellowe? Oh, my aunt, I mos' please to deaf wid him!"

"Ye'll be dead afore yer pleased, nigger," Tom sighed dolefully.

But Fellowes refused to despair.

"Nonsense, Tom," he exclaimed. "You shall be bosun. Think! A sharp, Yankee privateer that'll carry royals in an ordinary blow. You wait and see."

A few days later the sloop-of-war spoke the Shannon frigate, which made signal she was bound south with dispatches for Admiral Cookburn cruising off the capes of the Chesapeake, and Fellowes heard the signalman's report to Collishawe, and Collishawe's prompt rejoinder.

"My compliments, and ask 'em to heave to. Tell 'em Captain Collishawe has important documents for the admiral's attention. Mr. Curry, have a boat lowered. I'll see Captain Broke, myself."

Fellowes remembered the papers Collishawe had discussed with Cara Inglepin and Chater in the True Bounty's cabin. This could be no trivial plot, which was referred direct to the admiral commanding the blockading squadrons, having previously been endorsed by British authorities across the Atlantic.

Another reason for escape. Here should be a weapon with which to humble the Inglepins and Chater. For he mustn't waste all his hatred on Collishawe. No! It was Cara Inglepin who had betrayed him in the first place. And sneaking Saul Chater. If he might only escape! With any luck, he'd see them hung in chains for the traitors they were.

For several hours the two vessels tossed on the waves, then Collishawe's boat put off from the Shannon, and the frigate scurried away south, while the Badger tacked inshore to resume her patrol.

Dripping wet in his boat-cloak, Collishawe climbed the Badger's side as adroitly as though it was a garden-path. His eye lit on Fellowes, and the Long Islander, perceiving it, made a derisive tug at his forelock.

"You are the pressed man who was flogged?" Collishawe asked abruptly. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Cosmetics by the Ton

It requires 139,274 tons of cosmetics to keep milady beautiful for one year, according to statistics compiled by a famous authority on feminine pulchritude. That means an average of 7.9 pounds per woman.

The last weekly report issued by Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, shows a marked improvement in the prevalence of all contagious diseases except measles and scarlet fever. Measles, however, jumped from 681 in the previous week to 923.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson
Illinois State Association

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson in a communication to stockmen and prospective exhibitors at the state fair this year, outlines the policies that will guide the operation of the exposition planned for August 16-23 in part as follows: "During my tenure of office I want earnestly to make the state fair a true expression of a well-rounded agriculture—a show window, in fact, reflecting the utmost of attainment in all departments. 'Nothing shall be left undone in achieving this ambition. Naturally, therefore, the appointment of a director of agriculture and a general manager for the fair, men who would accomplish the desires of the administration, called for great care in selection. Stuart E. Pierson and Milton E. Jones are eminently fitted for this task. Mr. Pierson, the new director, is a business man of outstanding prominence, as well as a practical farmer and in complete sympathy with the needs of the industry. Mr. Jones, the new fair manager, is likewise a man of the soil, with a background of experience and achievement in the business of farming and live stock production. The administration represents these officials in welcoming representative exhibits from the four corners of this country and urges that you open the 1930 circuit at Springfield."

The 1929-1930 Illinois State Blue Book, the first to be issued by Secretary of State William J. Stratton, is being distributed. The book comprises 1,100 pages and is elaborately indexed and cross-indexed. Voluminous statistics are provided on everything relative to the state government and also on many things of state-wide interest not relating directly to the government.

A new rivers and harbors bill, authorizing expenditure of more than $115,000,000 to expand the inland waterway system of the nation and improve its seaports, virtually completed by the house rivers and harbors committee, will be called for passage April 23. One of the 119 projects embraced in the appropriation bill is the completion of the Illinois waterway at an expenditure of $7,500,000.

Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has ruled that telephone, power, light or railroad companies must receive consent from highway officials to erect poles along highways. To erect poles along township roads the consent of township highway commissioners must be obtained and along state aid roads the consent of the county board of supervisors and the state highway department is necessary, according to the opinion.

"There can be no doubt but that an increase in demand for products of Illinois factories, soil and mines, will have its effect upon individual citizens," declared United States Senator Otis F. Glenn, in the statement by which he endorsed the activities of the Buy-Illinois-Products commission. "I believe," continued Senator Glenn, "public officials should be highly commended for a policy of buying state products for home consumption where it is economically possible. And when that is not the case, our trade should go preferably to our own customers in neighboring states. I congratulate the governor of Illinois and the general assembly for their plan to improve general business conditions by increasing the sale of state products. It is a laudable effort and deserving of full support."

By preserving and canning their annual crops of fruits and vegetables, the penal and charitable institutions of Illinois are saving the taxpayers more than a million and a half dollars annually, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has been informed by A. C. Everingham, state farm consultant. "There were canned last year a total of 375,159 gallons of fruits and vegetables," Mr. Everingham said. "Thus it is apparent every state institution with a large population should be provided with canning or other preserving equipment. Waste would be largely eliminated. More of our people would be usefully and healthfully employed. We could take one more step toward the goal of institutional self-sustenance, greatly to the relief of the taxpayer."

A spring building program that includes the construction of four new buildings at an estimated cost of more than $725,000 is now under way at the University of Illinois, Prof. James M. White, supervising architect, has announced. The new fireproof chemistry annex, women's gymnasium, a filtration plant, and a new agronomy seed house are the items in this program.

The last weekly report issued by Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, shows a marked improvement in the prevalence of all contagious diseases except measles and scarlet fever. Measles, however, jumped from 681 in the previous week to 923.

During the first quarter of this year production of coal in Illinois fell off 2,296,488 tons as compared with a similar period in 1929. John C. Millhouse, director of mines and minerals has reported to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson.

First installments of taxes levied on the 1929 assessment for state purposes and due April 15 are being paid by the several county collectors and ordered into the state treasury through the office of Oscar Nelson, auditor of public accounts. The first collector to settle was M. H. Palmier of Randolph county, who settled on April 10.

The lift span of the new state bridge across the Illinois river at Florence was swung into place on Friday, April 11. Highway officials believe the bridge will be ready for traffic some time in May.

Responding to the request of Thomas A. Edison through his assistant, Frank R. Schell, that he designate an Illinois boy to compete in the tests to be given with a view to selecting the one boy who will be Mr. Edison's successor, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has appointed the following men as a committee of selection: Francis G. Blair, state superintendent of public instruction, Springfield; President David Kinley of the University of Illinois; President L. C. Lord of Teachers' college at Charleston; President G. A. Andreen of Augustana college at Rock Island; Superintendent W. J. Bogan, of Chicago; County Superintendent Justin Washburn of Rock Island; Mr. F. L. Eversull, principal of high school, East St. Louis. President Kinley will act as chairman and Superintendent Blair as secretary of the commission.

The Lincoln Memorial commission, a recommendation body of 21, 5 of whom were members of the house at the last general assembly, 5 of the senate, and 11 citizens appointed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, held a meeting in the hall of representatives on April 15 to consider plans for restoration of Lincoln shrines throughout the state.

The commission approved a tentative plan by which the support of allied societies throughout the state will be enlisted to rebuild several sites in their original detail. Logan Hay, chairman of the group, presided. Booklets will be published soon describing objectives established by the commission and recommendations will be prepared for the legislature suggesting state aid in some projects.

Completion this year of the $100,000 endowment fund for which local clubs and federations affiliated with the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs have been working for nine years, is predicted in a statement by Mrs. Fred Cowdin, chairman of the committee arranging for the Well Equipped Home exposition to be held in Springfield during the week of May 19. The exposition, which is a part of the annual convention, will be held in the state arsenal.

"Approximately 100 manufacturers, distributors and others producing and dealing in household devices and home equipment will participate in the exposition," Mrs. Cowdin stated. "We anticipate an attendance of more than 75,000 at the exposition, of whom more than 50,000 will be women. The convention and exposition are expected to attract more than 20,000 visiting women in Springfield during the week," Mrs. Cowdin said.

Prof. Charles E. Chadsey, fifty-nine, dean of the University of Illinois college of education since 1919 and one of the foremost educational authorities in the state, died on April 9 of heart disease. He had been ill for two days. He had served as superintendent of schools in Denver, Detroit and Chicago during his educational career, and was a former president of the department of superintendents of the National Education association.

The Chicago Sanitary district must reduce the diversion of water from Lake Michigan into the Chicago river to not more than 1,500 feet per second by the close of 1938. The United States Supreme court adopted the report of Special Master Charles E. Hughes which proposed a plan embodying these limitations. This diversion is in addition to what the city may pump from the lake for domestic purposes. The opinion was rendered by Justice Holmes, and there was no dissent announced.

The building to house the airways weather station at Commercial airport, Springfield, is nearing completion, and installation of weather instruments and equipment will proceed immediately under direction of C. J. Root, government meteorologist. When the station is in operation, hourly reports will be given to strategic points on the nation's principal airways, and Springfield will receive similar reports from 11 stations on the hookup.

Prof. Walter S. Monroe, director of the bureau of educational research at the University of Illinois for the last nine years, has been designated acting dean of the college of education to succeed Dean Charles E. Chadsey, who died recently.

Illinois has exactly 8,449.52 miles of surfaced highways, according to a report submitted to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson by Director H. H. Cleveland of the department of public works and buildings, and Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets. There are 6,490.84 miles in the state bond issue and federal aid system; 259.44 in the state aid system; 1,698.76 miles in the county 15-D system, and 30.48 miles of surfaced highway classed as miscellaneous. Approximately 8,000 miles of the surfaced highways in the state are concrete.

YOUTH--AND THE NEW LEADERSHIP

By CRAIG B. HAZLEWOOD
President American Bankers Association

LEADERSHIP is a picturesque word. With it, one pictures Hannibal fighting his way through the passes of the Alps—Napoleon in his campaigns—or Washington holding together his half-frozen army by the sheer magnetism of his character at Valley Forge. But I visualize something that holds a more astounding spectacle in many respects than any of these. It is the onrush of our business life. Our economic progress plunges ahead at a rate unheard of in the history of the nations of the world and every industrial and financial leader is daily brought face to face with new and perplexing problems requiring the highest courage and intelligence for their solution.

Ninety billions a year, they tell us, this country is now producing in new wealth. The rate of increase is even more staggering than the amount. It is difficult to say where it may lead us in even ten or fifteen years.

We are moving exceptionally fast. Our economic and industrial structure is placing before us problems of greater and greater magnitude. Few men can see far ahead. Few are in complete control, for this is a changing world, as even the most inexperienced business man will readily testify. Our methods of adjusting ourselves rapidly to economic changes and of cooperating are far from perfect.

What an opportunity the leadership of five, ten or fifteen years from now presents! What an adventure it will be! What responsibilities it will lay upon the broadest shoulders that may be found! This is the challenge to leadership as I see it. In the hands of the young men must rest the responsibility for this leadership.

Boys Who Reached the Pinnacles

Business is full of the romance of youngsters whose chief characteristic was working hard and keeping at it. There was a green farmer boy who decided he would rather stand behind a counter than follow a plow. He seemed so obviously lacking in sales ability that for a time no merchant would hire him. He failed in his first position, and in his second his salary was reduced. He even agreed that he was a misfit—but he stuck. Out of his first five stores, I believe, three failed. But he persisted and worked hard. And that boy, Frank W. Woolworth, became the greatest retail merchant in the world with a store in every city of eight thousand or more population in this country.

There was another lad who clerked in a grocery store sixteen hours a day and studied mathematics in his odd moments. He became interested in the doings of the steel plant whose employees traded at this store. He began to study steel and sought a position in the plant. He carried a surveyor's chain and drove stakes. At night he studied mathematics and engineering. He did not despair. He could not be diverted. He kept the pressure on for seven years. And that boy, Charles Schwab, mastered the iron industry and became one of the country's great industrial leaders.

There was a lad who sold papers on a train. When he grew up, several million men and a score of billions of dollars of capital were given profitable employment through his inventions. Even in middle life, Thomas Edison continued to work twenty hours a day, if necessary to achieve his purpose.

Leadership is not play. Leadership offers countless positions of varying opportunity, of which the highest pinnacles will mean almost unbearable responsibility in the new era. There will be men with the fire and iron to qualify even for these places. Such men must have had the very finest preparation and the most grueling tests. Their reward will be the attainment of these highest pinnacles of achievement, and the rendering of an immeasurable service to their times.

Why save pennies and waste dollars

Cheap printing may save you a few pennies of cost, but it will cost you dollars in results. Just another way of saying

Today.

There is a thing called yesterday, but that is only the dust-bin at the door, into which we cast our refuse, our failures, our worn-out souls. There is a thing called tomorrow, bursting with far better things than those which we have discarded. But in today the whole passionate force of the universe is poured—and therefore today is marvellous.—S. P. B. Maile.
